THE MENOKIN FOUNDATION
2010 Annual Report

With the help of donors like you,
we've accomplished so much in 2010.

Among other activities, our donors:

#1

Helped us become a member of the Chesapeake Bay Gateways Site through the National Park Service. This means that Menokin now is part of a network that spans several states so people can see and visit us as one of the Bay's special places.

Brought programs to more than 2,500 people. Highlights included • Rappahannock

Institute for Lifelong Learning Three Part Lecture:

“Virginia Indian History and Contemporary Issues: One Indian’s Perspective.” • Memoir Writing • “Back in Time” Recertification Summer Program for Area Teachers • Springfield trips for area 4th graders • Historic Preservation Theory and Practice at Rappahannock Community College class • Invasive Plant Presentation and Demonstration

Helped us finish cataloguing the last of the fallen parts of the house.

Helped keep the Saving the Past with Glass Project moving forward. You made it possible to ask expert teams around the nation to submit qualifications to become the group that actually executes the glass concept project.

#4

Thank you for your support in 2010!

Dear Friends of Menokin,

As I write to you about the Menokin Foundation's 2010 activities, I can't help but hear my tenth grade history teacher's voice as she gave me these words of wisdom, "Sarah, prior planning prevents poor performance!" The "5 P's" as my teacher called them stuck with me so that I never waited until the last minute to write a term paper (or almost never). They ring true today as I work with the Trustees and Advisors of the Menokin Foundation to develop the vision for the home of Francis Lightfoot Lee.

Your generous contributions over the past five years have been put to work extracting, documenting and storing the thousands of pieces of Menokin that had fallen into its cellar. 2010 saw the completion of that work and was a year of planning and discussion with our Board and Advisory Council of experts in the fields of architecture, engineering, conservation, and history on the best steps to meet our vision to become known internationally. We want to help the world with new answers to how we interpret the past and how we keep and tell the stories of world heritage sites.

Charting the course for our Saving the Past with Glass Project, an innovative approach to the interpretation of a National Historic Landmark, home of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a giant "architectural jigsaw puzzle," is a task that we entered thoughtfully, with great care, and remembering that prior planning does indeed prevent poor performance.

Our Advisory Council met several times during 2010 and developed recommendations to the Board on the performance expectations of the glass building concept and the steps we must take to execute the project. With heartfelt thanks, I share our four year timeline for the glass building project—a timeline developed through the planning and expertise of our Board and Advisory Council and made possible through the generous contributions of our 2010 donors.

End of 2011: We will select the team to implement the Glass House. The team will include such professionals as architects, engineers, structural glass engineers, museum leaders, contractors, landscape architects, lighting designers, and others needed to design this internationally ground-breaking project.

2012: The team will complete the preliminary design and create models and drawings. We'll expand our Advisory Council of experts to include leaders that will fully develop programs to make us a "go to" place for interpreting historic sites around the world. We'll determine construction costs more clearly when the design, models and drawings are completed.

2013: Our expert team will complete construction documents, and we will complete planning for programs to tell all the wisdom the site has to offer on so many subjects.

2014: We will complete stabilization of remaining areas of Menokin and make the house ready to integrate with glass walls.

2015: The Glass Building Project will be ready to begin.

During this planning period, we want to hear your ideas about the project. We'll provide many opportunities to hear your thoughts and answer questions. Please contact me with early thoughts and questions if you have them. If you've not had the opportunity to read the overview of the project in Virginia Living magazine, you can read it from our web site (www.menokin.org). I would be delighted to e-mail or mail you the article if you prefer. You can always contact me at spope@menokin.org; (804) 333-1776.

I welcome your input and look forward to relaying our progress.

David G. Woodcock, Chair

David Woodcock received his professional degree in Architecture and a Diploma in Town and Country Planning from the University of Manchester, England. He has taught at the University of Manchester and the Kent Institute of Art and Design in Canterbury, England. He was a Fulbright Teaching Fellow at Texas A&M University from 1962-66, and returned to the Architecture faculty in 1970. He was promoted to Full Professor in 1976, and served a total of eleven years as head of the department. In 1977 he founded the historic preservation education and research program, now the Center for Heritage Conservation, serving as Director until 2009, and was named Director Emeritus in 2010. He was named a Distinguished Professor by the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture in 1991, and elected to the College of Fellows of the American Institute of Architects in 1991. In 2004 he was elected to the College of Fellows of the Association for Preservation Technology International, for which he served as President in 2000 and 2001. He was named a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London in 2004. He served as chair of the AIA Historic Resources Committee in 2009. The National Council for Preservation Education presented him with the James Marston Fitch Preservation Education Lifetime Achievement Award in 2010. He retired from teaching in May 2011, and continues practice as a Historic Preservation Consultant to a variety of institutional and private clients.

Reid Freeman

Reid Freeman is a registered architect in the State of New York, a founder of Barker Freeman Design Office, based in Brooklyn, and a principal at James Carpenter Design Associates (JCDA) in New York City that specializes in structural glass building design and construction. His work experience includes eight years at Architecture Research Office, a winner of the National Design Award in Architecture, as a Senior Associate and time at Audrey Matlock Architects and Eisenman Architects as a designer. Reid has taught classes and studios in design and construction in the masters programs of architecture at Princeton University, Harvard University, and Tulane University for Architect's week. Since 2008 he has been a part-time faculty member at Parson School of Design teaching thesis design studio and construction technology in the masters of architecture program. Reid was JCDA's project architect / project manager for the recently completed 95,000 sq. foot expansion of the Israel Museum in Jerusalem. Current projects at JCDA include an addition to Bornholms Kustmuseum in Denmark and corporate sponsored research and new product development for day-lighting and new glass technologies. He holds a Bachelor of Arts from Colgate University and a Masters of Architecture from the Harvard University Graduate School of Design.

Richard B. Garlock

Rich Garlock is a Senior Associate and a Structural Engineer with Leslie E. Robertson Associates, R.L.L.P. He has worked on a diverse set of projects in the US and abroad, during his 17 years with the firm, ranging from university lab buildings to high rise towers. He is currently onsite Project Manager of the World Trade Center 4 Tower in New York City, which will reach 947-ft (290-m) upon completion. Rich has served as project manager for the firm's work at Princeton University. These include the Friend Center for Engineering Education, the School of Architecture addition and the Butler College expansion. He has worked on several of the firm's sustainable projects including the award-winning William Jefferson Clinton Presidential Center in Little Rock, which achieved a LEED-Silver Rating. Rich earned his Master of Science in Civil Engineering from Lehigh University, and holds a Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from Syracuse University. Starting in 2004, he has been a Visiting Lecturer at Princeton University.

Lucy Lawliss

Lucy Lawliss is the National Park Service Superintendent for two parks, George Washington Birthplace National Monument (NM) in Virginia, and Thomas Stone National Historic Site (NHS) in Maryland. Lucy has more than 16 years of service with the National Park Service. She came to George Washington Birthplace NM and Thomas Stone NHS from a group of four historical parks in the San Francisco East Bay—Rosie the Riveter/World War II Home Front National Historical Park, John Muir National Historic Site, Eugene O'Neill National Historic Site, and Port Chicago Naval Magazine National Monument. She began her career as the first historical landscape architect in the NPS Southeast Regional Office in Atlanta and built the cultural landscape program there. For ten years, she has served on the board and been co-chair of the National Association for Olmsted Parks and has also served on the board of Southern Garden History Society. Lucy is a registered landscape architect with undergraduate and master's degrees in landscape architecture from the University of Georgia, School of Environmental Design.

Calder Loth

In a career spanning four decades, Calder Loth, as senior architectural historian at the Virginia Department of Historic Resources, shaped the direction of historic preservation programs from survey and National Register listings to rehabilitation tax credits, review and compliance, and preservation easements. Calder is a long-standing member of the Virginia Art and Architecture Review Board. His expertise has shaped the preservation and renovation of many buildings including the Virginia State Capital and the historic executive mansion. He continues to give back to the preservation community as a staunch advocate and widely published author for “architectural literacy” giving lectures to museums, universities, and professional societies worldwide. In 2008, Calder received the first annual “Secretary of the Interior Historic Preservation Award” given by Secretary of the Interior Dirk Kempthorne. He has been an Honorary Trustee of the Menokin Foundation since its inception in 1994.

Eryl P. Wentworth

Eryl Wentworth has served as the Executive Director of American Institute for Conservation since 2004, following a museum career spanning over 20 years. Her most recent museum position, held for six years, was Director of The Octagon, Museum of the American Architectural Foundation, a museum of architecture and design and an 1801 National Historic Landmark. With an M.A. in anthropology and museum training and a background in conservation, she has supported the care of collections throughout her career by working with conservators to plan and implement major re-housing, storage, treatment, and exhibition projects and by securing federal and private foundation grants for preservation and conservation projects. She has served as a panelist for NEH challenge grants and preservation and access grants, along with IMLS conservation project support grants, and has served on the boards of both local and national nonprofit organizations.

Matt Webster

Architectural Conservator and Manager of Architectural Collections for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, Matt Webster oversees work on over 600 structures, as well as the architectural fragments collection. Prior to this he served as the Director of Preservation at Drayton Hall where he oversaw the Architecture, Archaeology, Curatorial, Landscape, and Facility departments. From 2001 until 2006, he served as the Director of Architectural Restoration at Kenmore, the 1770s home of Fielding and Betty Washington Lewis. While at Kenmore he was responsible for the entire architectural research collection owned by George Washington’s Fredericksburg Foundation. Matt serves on the Board of Directors and as Director of Educational Programs for Falmouth Heritage Renewal in Falmouth, Jamaica, and travels there annually to teach the local population preservation trades.

James Zehmer

James Zehmer is the preservation project manager for the University of Virginia. He oversaw the recent restoration of Pavilion X at the University. James is currently overseeing the restoration of other historic buildings included in the UNESCO World Heritage site of the Lawn at the University of Virginia. Before coming to the University of Virginia, James worked on the Virginia State Capitol restoration team. James holds an undergraduate degree in architecture from the University of Virginia and worked for several years as a preservation carpenter before coming to the state capitol project. James also serves on the Menokin Foundation Board of Trustees.
